TODAY IS GIVEN.

The right to exercise the right of eminent domain is extended to smelting companies in a bill which passed the house yesterday. If it becomes a law smelting companies will have the right to condemn property within a radius of four miles of their works, which means an area with a diameter of eight miles. This area with a diameter of eight miles. This is based on the proposition that the smelting company has acquired by purchase or otherwise 75 per cent of the property within such area, leaving only 25 per cent, at the maximum, to be condemned, in case it is necessary to condemn at all.

The bill is No. 85, a substitute for a former bill. It passed the house with flive votes in the negative. Seven were absent and the vote, therefore, was: Ayes, 33; noes, 5; absent, 7. The members who voted in the negative were McRae, Ashton, England, Porter and William McMillan. The bill went to the sepate, where it was referred to the committee on mines and smelting.

Clegg gave notice of a reconsideration of the vote today.

In the Smoke Zone.

The bill was championed by Mr. Baker of Tooele, who said that arrangements were practically completed for the erection of a smelter at the mouth of Pine valley, to cost $3,000,000. Eighty per cent of the district, approximately, had signified their willingness that the smelter should be established, but progress was obstructed, he said, by a few who owned a very small part of the land involved in any part of the area.

Mr. Baker said that it would be much easier to compute the area by lines and boundaries, and that if the amendment prevailed it would result in no end of disputes.

The house has acquired the early risting habit. Mr. Holman moved to defer, but this was lost. Archibald and Wootton spoke earnestly for the bill. Mr. Archibald, in substance, said that the mining industry is greater than the agricultural and that home smelters are the first essentials.

Mr. McRae in Opposition. Mr. McRae made an earnest speech against the bill. He pointed out that the evils resulting from smelter smoke and fumes spread over a territory far in the Packard Library auditorium. Exand fumes spread over a territory far in excess of the four-mile radius, and declared, in effect, that the smoke from declared, in effect, that the smoke from the smelters in the vicinity of Murray and Bingham Junction had a blighting effect upon vegetation as far north as Bountiful. Mr. McRae employed the blackboard in elucidating his ideas. During the morning session Mr. Ashton invited Mr. Doubrey to occupy a seat at his side. Objection was made on the ground that Mr. Doubrey was an interested party. The speaker ruled that, as at his side. Objection was made on the ground that Mr. Doubrey was an interested party. The speaker ruled that, as the invited guest of a member, any person was entitled to the courtesy, but that it must be distinctly understood that no lobbying must be indulged in. In the afternoon Mr. Ashton resented the "aspersiom" which he believed had been intended to be cast on him, and declared that there was no power on earth that could influence his vote while he was a member of the house.

There was a long discussion on house bill No. %, a substitute for No. 4, which provides for the care of the feeble-minded and non-insane epileptics. The question of age entered largely into the debate.

IRRIGATION DISTRICTS

House bill No. 48, by Rock M. Pope of Wasatch, providing for the creation of ir-rigation districts, was passed by the house yesterday without a dissenting vote. The bill goes at length into the details necessary for the establishment of the ma-chinery of elections and the like. Gen-erally speaking, when a number of landerally speaking, when a number of land-lords or land owners, conclude to irrigate a tract of land by means of a common system of canals and ditches, they must do so by calling a special election. If the proposition is favored, the enterprise is carried out. The bill, which is patterned after the Colorado law largely, but which includes the best of the laws of other western states, with additions to conform to local conditions, is considered of first importance in many of the districts where irrigable land is to be found in vast tracts.
